SCRUGHAM FAVORS BLUE SKY LAW; NO DENIAL

With the news of Scrugham's visit to the committee, those interested in the results of all bills are now waiting for the committee's report. The committee has been working on the bill for some time, and it is expected that they will soon have a report ready. The bill is a measure to regulate the mining industry, and it is expected that it will be passed by the legislature.

Why do the democrats, in making their campaign, hire private conveyances to transport them from one place to another, instead of resorting to the public conveyances, licensed by the state? It is simply because they have been in such a habit of violating the laws of the state that they cannot get over the habit.

It is a through statement that the mining industry has flourished in the past, and it will be through propositions that it will continue to thrive. We have all witnessed the effects of the operation of the blue sky law in California, and whenever the commission on corporations of that state took the fancy he has put a camp in the mining industry of Nevada. An over-zealous turn of events would place a blue sky law in operation in Nevada, so if you want to see the mining industry of Nevada killed at one fell swoop, then make it a point to vote for this man Scrugham, who is heading the democratic state ticket. If you would see Nevada's great industry flourish, then you will vote for John H. Miller, who will be your next governor in any event.

BRING POPULAR PHRASE UP TO THE MINUTE

If public speakers are quoted correctly in the newspapers, and it is fair to presume that they are, a great many of them appear to be a few paces behind the times. Rare is the day that some speaker is not berated in the public press as having declared with solemn impressiveness that "prosperity is just around the corner."

The gentlemen who make this statement are about a half block behind the times. Prosperity is not "just around the corner." It turned the corner many weeks ago, and now it is here. Democratic orators in the present campaign are denying that statement, just as they are denying a great many other palpable truths, but the evidences are too plain.

Statistics of governmental departments, for one thing, show that the period of depression, which was the natural and unescapable aftermath of the world war, is a thing of the past. Unemployment, these statistics show, is now but a memory, while the wage average has taken a healthy increase.

But one does not have to go to governmental statistics to learn that prosperity is here, for the evidences are right under his eyes. Right here in the Tonopah district large mine development has been held up in the last few weeks, because operators were unable to obtain sufficient employees in the face of the fact that they offered higher wages than they had been paying in many months.

When the "prosperity is just around the corner" phrase was first used it was doubtless true. It was too good a phrase to pass up, and as all the other public speakers pounced on it and have been working it overtime ever since. It sounds so good and evokes such applause that they are loath to turn it loose. In the interest of accuracy, however, they ought to send it back into oblivion where it belongs.

LIVING ABROAD AND IN AMERICA

When the ways and means committee of the house was framing the

JOBS FOR EVERYBODY

The unemployment problem is with us no more. A year ago it was estimated there were 5,500,000 men looking for jobs. They have not all found work, but those who are willing to work and have not found the opportunity are not in excess of our normal idle population. This result has been achieved in spite of the scores of strikes engineered by designing labor bosses. The mines, the railroads, the textile mills, the shoe factories and many other industries have been hard hit by the conspiracies of professional and unscrupulous agitators, but they have not only weathered the storm but have actually given employment in the aggregate to upward of 3,000,000 more individuals than were working at this time last year.
